

Taridium adds Apple iPhone interface to Enterprise PBX

New York, New York – June 17, 2009 – Taridium, the next generation VoIP solutions provider, today announced the immediate availability of the ipbx iPhone interface for its award winning enterprise PBX solution.

With the ipbx mobile interface your employees always stay ahead of the game. Visual voicemail allows them to listen to their office voicemail directly from their iPhone, check their recent calls, call users back as if they were at their desk and even host telephone conferences. This does not only save money, but also allows access to the Taridium unified voicemail system, where a single mailbox serves VoIP phones, mobile phones and any other phone that supports conditional call diversion.

If required for compliance reasons, all calls passed through the mobile phone can be recorded and immediately reviewed on the phone. Users are presented with a familiar interface that seamlessly integrates their iPhones into the office telephone system.

“One of the big advantages of the Taridium ipbx iPhone interface is that users can now access internal PBX extensions directly from their mobile phone with a single click – it basically allows you to take your office extension with you” says Dominique Kull, Taridium’s CTO.

The Taridium ipbx iPhone interface comes standard with all ipbx installs and with Taridium’s ipbx eXpress software. The interface is compatible with Apple’s iPhone, iPhone 3G and iPhone 3G S.
